Three authors of recent books who examine war trauma and healing share their work and join our moderator to discuss the challenge that faces us all: How can war veterans come back whole to themselves, their families, and their community?

Moderator: Kathryn Basham, Ph.D., LICSW, Professor and Co-Director of the Ph.D. Program at the Smith College School for Social Work. Much of her research and therapy practice address the effects of deployment, combat stress and re-integration on veterans and their families.

Thursday, April 9 • Smith College, Seelye Hall #106

Free Admission
